... "the logical character of Christian affirmations"

IN THAT REMARKABLE BOOK for college students and questing minds of all ages, EXPLORING THE LOGIC OF FAITH, "two college professors . . . both teachers of modern philosophy . . . discuss the logical character of Christian affirmations. In a series of exchanges which they alternately initiate, they unfold the logical considerations which make it difficult for one but possible for the other to recite the Apostles' Creed with a Christian congregation.

"Chiefly at issue here are the logic of Christian utterances and how they behave in relation to other affirmations . . . Kent Bendall of Wellesley College, a 'critically minded Christian sympathizer,' raises the question of an ineluctable content in Christian faith which cannot be denied without either giving up the historical meaning of 'Christian' or deceiving one's fellow confessors . . . [He] develops the rubrics of 'critical inquiry' in a remarkably sequential and self-demanding way . . . "Frederick Ferré [of Dickinson College] gets the last word and uses it to show not only that a committed life is compatible with a guarded assent to creedal assertions, and necessary in any case, but that this has always been acknowledged to be the case . . .

"Certainly this is a discussion which warms the reader around the ears and around the heart. Readers on each side of this question may learn from this book to be 'sympathizers' with those on the other—with those who continue to repeat Christian utterances from within the circle of faith and with those who can only say how faith continues to look from the outside."

Thus writes Richard Luecke about EXPLORING THE LOGIC OF FAITH in The Christian Century. It's available at your religious bookseller's at $4.50 in hard cover or at $2.25 in the new SEMINARY PAPERBACKS edition.

... "an astute Interpretation" of the 2nd Vatican Council

FOR BEHIND-THE-HEADLINES UNDERSTANDING of the 2nd Vatican Council, turn to Claud D. Nelson's THE VATICAN COUNCIL AND ALL CHRISTIANS, which Dean M. Kelley in The Christian Century calls "an astute and helpful interpretation of this assembly's genesis and promise [which] sagaciously assesses the contributions [it] may make to Christian unity." America refers to it as "informed writing," and World Outlook says it is an "invaluable introduction." It's only $3.00 at your religious bookseller's.
